Hi, I'M CHAD

I'm Chad Hymas—an author, keynote speaker, and leadership coach who's spent the last two decades helping people turn adversity into advantage. At 27, a 2,000-pound bale of hay shattered my neck and left me a quadriplegic. But that accident didn't paralyze my purpose. Since then, I've traveled the globe, sharing stories and strategies with leaders, teams, and organizations who want to lead with purpose, build resilient cultures, and create lasting impact.

I speak from experience—about leadership, safety, resilience, and personal accountability—because I've lived through the fire. My goal isn't just to inspire, but to equip people with tools they can use to thrive through change and challenge. Whether I'm on stage or in a workshop, I challenge audiences to rise above limits, embrace their unique role, and lead with intention. This isn't about a comeback story—it's about helping others write theirs.

In 2001, then-27-year-old Chad Hyman had everything – a beautiful wife, two sons, two thriving businesses and parents and brothers who loved and supported him in everything he did. It seemed he couldn't fail. Everything he touched turned to gold. And then a rushed decision to ignore safety in favor of getting home to see his baby boy take his first steps changed everything forever. A few minutes of caution could've kept his golden life on track, and he would live to regret his decision – until he changed his mind about what his life was for.
